

I would support allowing the use of European FRS radios in the US, provided they are limited to short term (2 wk or less) visitors, and only on channels other than the calling frequency. Also the use of private line or similar tones should be forbidden to prevent keying tone protected repeater systems. The rules should be explained on visiting flights/ships if approved. I do not feel any interference generated would cause a significant impact on US Amateur operations provided some restrictions are imposed. I would not support their use unless restrictions are imposed to protect US Amateur operations. With some rules and tone-protection to protect our repeaters, I feel the goodwill generated would outweigh any interference.